Blurb of the Madrid multiplier event:

Engagement with diverse stakeholders such as policy makers, faculty and industry experts, as well as rights-holders such as young people, women and girls in all their diversity, and environmental and human rights defenders, plays a central role in co-designing a curriculum that is responsive to contemporary societal and planetary needs. This engagement is crucial to ensure an inclusive, participatory and accountable process for a people-centred Just Transition. In this context, the Refocus Erasmus+ project, based on its local and transnational Communities of Practice, aims to improve current practices in the fields of transport, shipping and logistics and is a powerful tool to build capacity for climate literacy among students, teachers and professionals in these fields. This final multiplier event aims to bring together these diverse groups of stakeholders and rights-holders with different knowledge perspectives, and strengthen their capacity to work and learn together creatively.
